Special Presentation

“Operation Iraqi Freedom”

Lieutenant Colonel Victor Bakkila was a Captain in the 341st Military Police Company, Army Reserves, stationed in California in 2003. His unit received a call-up alert in August for Operation Iraqi Freedom. He was employed by the Costa Mesa Police Department who had to release him. After placing all of the unit’s equipment in containers, the Reservist boarded planes for the 17 hour flight to Kuwait. Their introduction to South West Asia was a heat blast of 111 degrees. They picked up their equipment at Camp Arifjan, Kuwait which is a very large logistic camp and traveled in the “Green convoys” (all Military) to the Tallil Air Base in southern Iraq near the biblical city of Ur. Part of their mission was to set up radio relay stations and patrol the roads. At Tallil Air Base they saw the results of Allied Air strikes on Sadam’s “harden” bunkers.

Military life in Iraq was demanding. Vic said he has never seen so much unexploded ordinance. They’d clear all they could see and then it rains and exposes more. He said to cope with the heat; he was drinking eight 1½ liter bottles of water a day.

His unit had to be on the lookout for IED’s. (Improvised Explosive Devices) At first the IED were command detonated by hooking up an electrical source to the explosives but that meant the insurgents had to be close by. Helicopter sweeps of the roads found the ambushes and killed the insurgents. Then they changed to radio detonators similar to door bells. The Allies countered by blasting high frequencies which would set off the explosives before the convoys arrived.

LTC Bakkila did a lot of work with the Iraqi police in training them. He was responsible for building a police station that could with stand an attack by insurgents.

Vic had an opportunity to visit one of Sadam’s palaces. It was bigger than our White House and marble and gold inlays everywhere including the bathrooms. It was on a lake with fish and many mini mansions that belonged to the Ba’ath Party members. All this existed while most Iraqis lived dirt poor.

Sadam also build many monuments. In downtown Baghdad, The Victory Arch, a monument to the war against Iran, is a huge sculpture of two hands, said to be Saddam's, holding two swords crossed. At the base of the swords are captured Iranian helmets. LTC Bakkila's unit was involved in fire fight that can be seen on

During the question and answer period, LTC Bakkila commented that he believes the Iraqi army and police will be able to handle the peace after the US leaves. Also the prejudice against women will take a long time to overcome. The Abu Grave prison embarrassment was caused by a failure in leadership by the officers in charge. The Commanding General and her staff were demoted and discharged.

An interesting side note. Victor Bakkila is a Sergeant with the Costa Mesa Police and he was the Artist and Designer for the Veterans Memorial at Harbor Lawn Cemetery. The Freedom Committee was involved in the dedication last Veterans Day. The Costa Mesa Community Foundation gave him a special thanks. "Without your time, effort, and dedication this project would remain a dream rather than a reality."
